

College Night for Parents and Students with Learning Differences

Slides Developed from the NCLD handout by
Colleen Lewis, Director Office of Disability
Services, Columbia University

www.nclld.org

High School	College
Special Education Model School personnel “find you” and decide eligibility for supports	Accommodations Model You must request help; no one will come to find you.
Where you receive services Special Education classroom, Resource Room, related service provider room (e.g. speech)	Where you receive services Differs from one college to another (“Office of Disability Support Services,” “Special Services”)

High School

Documentation

- Coordinated by school psychologist
- School develops IEP from documentation and test results
- Paid for by school

College

Documentation

- You must provide “proof” of your disability (e.g. HS records, independent reports e.g. medical, mental health, educational)
- Colleges can set their own guidelines for documentation ( e.g. no more than 3 years old)
- High schools are not required to do a comprehensive evaluation before graduation
- After HS, you are responsible for paying for new evaluations

High School

Special Education Law

- The Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) provides the mandate and funding to schools for in-school special education services as well as transportation/ buses to school, physical, occupational, speech therapy, and tutoring

College

Civil Rights Law

- American with Disabilities Act (ADA) and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation
- Colleges are required only to offer accommodations & support services, not services of a personal nature.
- Tutoring is not required under ADA. Some colleges offer tutoring through disability services and some colleges have tutoring centers for all students.
- Foreign Language waivers & other course substitutions are not automatic

While still in high school you need to:

- Talk to your parents, high school special education teacher, or guidance counselor to learn about your specific disabilities
- Understand the academic impact of your disability
- Understand your areas of strength and weakness

While still in high school you need to:

- Make sure that you have current documentation
- Read your disability documentation and understand it.
- Learn to express your current and future needs, concerns, interests, and preferences

Questions to ask:

- What services/programs each prospective college provides through their disability support office or other office that handles disability accommodations?
- How often are services available? Are the service providers on campus and available on an as-needed basis?
- Are there restrictions (e.g. times per week) or additional costs for using these services?

Programs vs. Support Services

- Programs are specifically designed for students with disabilities and provide more in-depth services and accommodations. Not all colleges have these types of programs. When offered, the most common types are designed for students with learning disabilities and/or ADHD. These programs usually have costs in addition to tuition. These programs often provide one-on-one tutoring and sessions with a learning disability specialist.
- Support Services are the resources available at no cost for students with disabilities. Support services include reasonable accommodations, such as extended time for assignment and testing, note-takers, the use of a calculator, and preferential seating in classrooms.

YOU'VE BEEN ACCEPTED TO A COLLEGE! NOW WHAT?

Register with the college's disability services office or program. Remember you need to:

- Contact that campus office—they will not find you.
- Provide disability documentation that is current & meets college guidelines.
- Request that accommodations you will need (note-takers, assistive listening devices, testing modifications, textbooks on tape, etc.).
- Request those accommodations before scheduled placement tests or you will not receive accommodations for those tests.

YOU'VE BEEN ACCEPTED TO A COLLEGE! NOW WHAT?

Arrange other supports not provided by the school:

- Do you need things like counseling, medication management, or other supports? Who will provide them for you & how will they affect your schedule?
- Develop back up plans for these supports.